While codes and limited-time events are the easiest way to get free Primogems, you can earn them the old-fashioned way too by playing the game and engaging in a select few activities spread across the world. Chests - If you're travelling across the world and come across any chests, be sure to open them! These contain a small number of Primogems that may not seem to matter much at first, but really add up over time! As an extra note, rarer chests provide more Primogems, so keep an eye out for exquisite chests as you play. Quests - If you've got any quests left unfinished, be sure to complete them if you want a relatively quick injection of Primogems! Story quests and event quests are especially rewarding, so keep an eye out for any that pop up. Daily commissions - There's no better way to earn consistent packages of Primogems than logging in every day and doing your commissions. These don't take too long and the rewards are considerable when compared to other sources. Achievements - You may not care much about achievements in Genshin Impact, but they can be a great source of primo gems. This is especially true of some of the more challenging achievements, so take a look to see if you're close to any major milestones for a quick Primogem prize. Fully exploring the map - If you've not travelled the full length of the map yet, unlocking fast travel points and clearing that fog of war is a fantastic way for newer players to earn themselves some quick primogems. Special promotion mail - Every now and again MiHoYo will send out gifts to players, usually with the launch of a major update, game anniversary, or your birthday! As such, be sure to keep checking your inbox for this lovely surprises. Real money purchases - This is Genshin Impact, and as such buying Primogems is a primary way to get your hands on a batch quickly. While you don't have to spend money, it's obviously the most reliable way to get the exact amount you want quickly. If you're wallet can tank the hit, it's a good option.
